

NEW BABY

A Step-by-Step Guide for Diego & Yuri

Baby due July 2026 * Japan * Australia

Diego (Australian Citizen) + Yuri (Japanese Citizen)

Baby due July 2026 * Born in Japan

PART 1 -- Japanese Registration (within 14 days of birth)

Step 1 * Register the birth at the local ward office (Yakusho)

Go to the city hall in the area where the baby is born
Yuri registers the birth as the mother -- this is a legal requirement in Japan
Baby automatically receives Japanese nationality through Yuri Need: Yuri's ID + hospital birth notification form (hospital provides this)

Step 2 * Have Diego listed as father on the birth register -- CRITICAL

Not married = paternity acknowledgement (Ninchi) is required
Yuri declares Diego as the father at the ward office
Diego does not need to be physically present for this Without this, Australian Embassy cannot verify paternity -- delays citizenship
ALSO: Tick the 'Reservation of Japanese Nationality' box on the form!
If skipped, baby may automatically lose Japanese nationality

Step 3 * Obtain and authenticate the birth certificate

Request official certified copies from the ward office (get multiple!)
Get an Apostille stamp -- makes the document valid internationally
(Apply via Ministry of Foreign Affairs or through the ward office)
Get a certified English translation from a professional translator
(NOT Google Translate -- must be a certified human translator)
Keep multiple originals -- needed for Australia, Japan, future use

Step 4 * Apply for Japanese passport (optional)

Not required, but very useful for travelling between Japan and Australia

PART 2 -- Australian Citizenship (lodge within 3 months of birth)

Step 5 * Book appointment at Australian Embassy Tokyo (book early!)

Appointments can take weeks -- book as soon as the baby is born
Website: japan.embassy.gov.au Phone: +81 3 5232 4111
Address: 2-1-14 Mita, Minato-ku, Tokyo

Step 6 * Prepare a Statutory Declaration (paternity statement)

Required because Diego and Yuri are not married

Signed legal document: both declare Diego is the biological father

Both Diego and Yuri sign it; witnessed by a notary or Justice of the Peace

Can be prepared before the embassy appointment

Step 7 * Submit Form 119 -- Australian Citizenship by Descent

Official form to register baby as an Australian citizen

Because Diego is Australian, baby qualifies automatically

Processing time: 4-8 weeks after submission

Step 8 * Apply for Australian Passport for the baby

Apply at the same embassy appointment

Need passport photo: white background, eyes open, no hat

Processing time: approximately 4-6 weeks

Step 9 * Dual Citizenship (no action needed now!)

Baby holds BOTH Australian AND Japanese passports until age 22

At age 22, baby must choose one -- this is many years away

PART 3 -- Returning to Australia

Step 10 * Travel arrangements

Baby travels on Australian passport -- no visa required (Australian citizen!)
Yuri travels on her partner visa -- confirm it's still valid before leaving Japan

Step 11 * Register baby with Medicare

Visit any Medicare office after arriving in Australia
Gives baby access to Australia's public health system
Bring: Australian citizenship certificate + Yuri's Medicare card

Step 12 * Apply for Family Tax Benefit A and B (Centrelink)

Australian Government financial support for families with children
Apply within 52 weeks of the date of birth
Website: servicesaustralia.gov.au

Full Document Checklist

OK Diego's Australian passport + citizenship certificate
OK Yuri's Japanese passport
 Japanese birth register with Diego listed as father <-- MOST IMPORTANT
 'Reservation of Japanese Nationality' box ticked on birth form
OK Apostilled birth certificate + certified English translation
OK Statutory Declaration signed by Diego + Yuri (paternity)
OK Evidence Diego lived in Australia (tax returns, utility bills, etc.)
OK Baby passport photos (white background)

Key Deadlines

Within 14 days of birth --> Register birth at the ward office (legal!)
Within 3 months of birth --> Lodge Australian citizenship application
At age 22 --> Baby chooses Australian or Japanese citizenship

Wishing you all the joy in the world!

Diego * Yuri * Baby -- A beautiful new family